

Rémi Lavoie, Assistant Director
La Pulperie de Chicoutimi/Musée régional

Trained as a museologist, Rémi Lavoie is currently the Assistant Director of La Pulperie de Chicoutimi/Musée régional where he has also been responsible for managing public programs, expositions and education since 2002. This managerial position at La Pulperie follows a noteworthy eight-year work experience in museum education at the Centre national d'exposition in Jonquière. He studied visual arts and teaching art at UQAC and holds a Master's degree in Museology from University of Montreal. His experience in museum education and carrying out special projects cumulates over 18 years of service, during which he created museum visit programs, organized several educational and cultural activities, while concurrently working on educational, interactive and multimedia exposition projects. Moreover, he has been actively participating for almost twenty years in the development of the regional museum environment through his involvement in several cultural committees. He is Chairman of the group of 18 member institutions of the Réseau muséal et patrimonial du Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean.

"Saguenay's nomination as Cultural Capital of Canada is a golden opportunity for all of us to highlight the strong potential of our local creators in arts and culture. As a mark of excellence, this distinguished national designation is a wonderful lever to allow the culture and arts to excel and become more democratic."
